- Reduce fine lines and wrinkles
- Improved skin texture and firmness

PEELINGS

CHEMICAL PEELING

Chemical peeling is a dermo-cosmetic treatment that consists of causing accelerated and controlled skin regeneration through the application of chemo exfoliating agents that allow it to act at different depths. The peeling action on the skin tissue favors the elimination of the outer layers of the skin in order to stimulate the production of collagen, elastin and glycosaminoglycans, as well as to improve their physiological and mechanical qualities.

TARGETS

- Purify and oxygenate the skin, leaving it hydrated and free of impurities.
- Close enlarged pores and improve skin texture.
- Combat the effects of skin aging, reducing wrinkles and providing turgor.
- Unify the tone, provide luminosity and improve skin imperfections.
- Lighten and attenuate pigmentary lesions, providing a depigmenting action.
- Reduce the manifestations of acne and improve the appearance of scars.

Arena Esthetics Peelings is an advanced line of specific chemical peels, designed for doctors who require safe, effective, easy-to-use and controllable products. It allows treating hyperpigmentation, manifestations of each phase of aging and stetopathies such as acne and its sequelae, couperose, rosacea, stretch marks and other imperfections.

Arena Esthetics Peelings OEM ensures unbeatable and progressive results, both in facial and body treatments, thanks to the union of a wide variety of high-quality chemical agents.

Safety and Quality - Each Arena Esthetics Peeling has a registration number granted by the Spanish Agency for Medicines and Health Products (AEMPS) that accredits them as cosmetic products (personal care). All Arena Esthetics facilities comply with the correct European manufacturing standards (GMP) and are authorized by the competent health authorities.

Chemical peelings can be classified into 4 levels, depending on the depth of their action, which in turn correlates with the nature and intensity of the lesions to be treated:

1) Very superficial
(Superficial stratum corneum) Provides uniformity to skin tone and a brighter appearance.

2) Superficial
(Epidermal to basal layer) Stimulates epidermal growth by removing the stratum corneum. It produces flaking similar to caused by excess sun.

3) Medium
(Papillary dermis) Medium peels reach the papillary dermis, produce significant desquamation inducing inflammation in the superficial dermis. They completely eliminate the epidermis, which is renewed until its total regeneration.

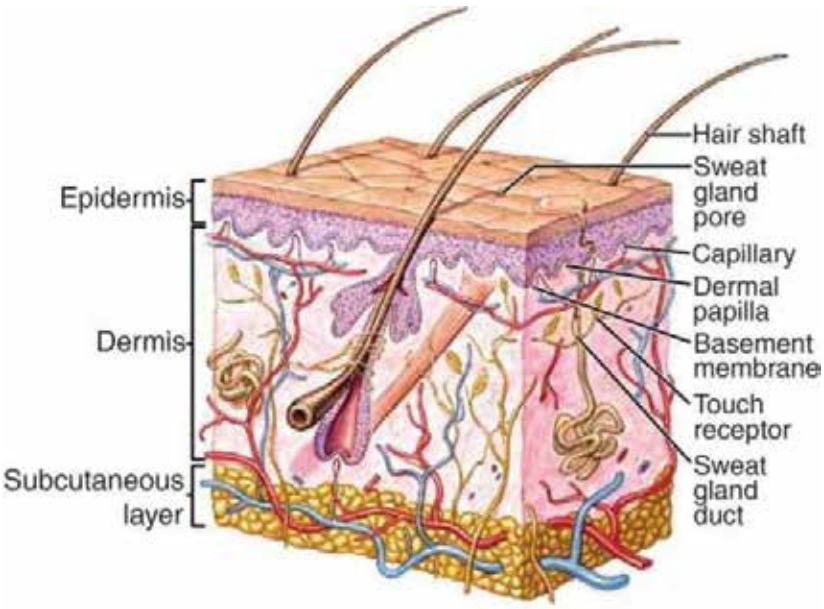

4) Deep
(Reticular dermis) Causes an inflammatory response of the reticular dermis by inducing a reconstruction of collagen and elastin fibers.

The depth reached in the peels is determined by different factors:

- Skin type and condition (history, thickness, area to be treated, activity and density of the sebaceous glands, integrity of the epidermal barrier, etc.).
- Type of chemical ingredient formulated (AHA, BHA, TCA, etc.).
- Concentration and pH
- The depth, intensity and effectiveness of the peeling varies with the increase in the concentration of the substance used and its pH.
- Texture

Peelings in aqueous, alcoholic or hydroalcoholic solutions penetrate and act quickly. The scope of its action is usually related to the amount of product and the number of layers applied. Gel peels guarantee an even, drip-free application. They penetrate the tissue more slowly, so their action depends on the exposure time.

- Application technique, quantity of product, number of layers applied, exposure time.
- Method of skin preparation before application and pre-treatment.

Mandelic Acid Peeling – Classification 1) Very Superficial

Mandelic acid is an alpha hydroxy acid (AHA) that works by breaking the protein bonds between corneocytes, causing them to detach. Stimulates the synthesis of collagen and proteoglycans promoting the skin rejuvenation process. Due to its larger molecular size, it penetrates slower than glycolic acid, thus providing a smoother and more progressive exfoliation. Revitalizing, moisturizing and firming skin.

- Preparatory peeling
- Sebum normalizer
- Decreases the size of pores
- Evens skin tone

Ideal before mesotherapy treatments and especially, before depigmenting treatments.

Mandelic Acid 50%, Dimethyl MEA 2%

pH 2.5 - 3.5

Ferulic Peeling – Classification 2) Superficial

Antioxidant, moisturizer stimulates the synthesis of collagen. Suitable for skins aged by the passage of time, photo-aged, smoker skin and devitalized.

- Grade II skin aging:
- Uneven tone
- Expression lines and wrinkles
- Improves the appearance of stretch marks

Ferulic acid 8%, Malic acid 5%, Citric acid 5% lactic acid 5%

pH 2.0 - 3.0

Lactic Acid Peeling – Classification 2) Superficial

Lactic acid is an alpha hydroxy acid (AHA) that acts by breaking the protein bonds between corneocytes, causing their detachment and a reduction in the thickness of the stratum hyperkeratotic corneum. Stimulates the production of new collagen and glycosaminoglycans constituents of the dermal matrix. It exerts a natural moisturizing effect on the skin by attracting water molecules towards the horny layer and stimulate the synthesis of ceramides, improving and modulating the barrier function. It is recommended for delicate areas such as neck and chest due to its high tolerance with the skin.

- Grade II skin aging:
- Fine lines and superficial wrinkles
- Lack of luminosity
- Improves cases of couperose and rosacea
- Reduces stretch marks

Lactic acid 40%

pH 1,5 – 2,5

Glycolic Acid Peeling – Classification 3) Medium

Glycolic acid is one of the most widely used alpha hydroxy acids (AHAs), as it's very effective in regulating and reactivating cellular synthesis processes. Its high skin tolerance and small molecular size give it a great trans epidermal penetration capacity. Anti aging, regenerating, exfoliating, illuminating. Suitable for aging skin with spots, expression wrinkles, matt skin, acne and scars.

- Moderate skin aging grade III:
- Moderate photoaging
- Medium wrinkles
- Skin flaccidity
- Enlarged pores
- Moderate dyschromia
- Superficial acne scars

Glycolic 35%, Kojic acid 7%, Citric acid 7%, Lactic acid 5%, Salicylic acid 2%.

pH 1.0 – 2.0

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

How long is the process from Start to Finish?

The process may vary depending on the number of products, the amount of time required for research and development, and\or the time to manufacture special materials\packaging. It typically takes 2-3 months to receive your products ready.

What Is the Minimum Order Quantity?

Minimum Order Quantity (MOQ) is determined based on the specific details of your Product Development Request.
Please send to us your Product Development Request Form with providing all the details and we will contact you to discuss it.

Can you take a product I am currently making elsewhere and reproduce it?

With only a sample and a set of ingredients, we can match any products or even improve them if you so desire.

Are the formulas that you produce for the customer protected?

When Arena Esthetics creates the formula specifically for the client at his request and\or a set of ingredients, or the client initially contacts us with a request of production according to his formula, then such a formula will be custom and exclusive only for him. The client also can choose one of our in-house formulas.

How long does it take to receive my initial custom formulated samples?

It can vary depending on your demand but it typically takes 20 business days.

Does Arena Esthetics provide its customers with full documentation?

Arena Esthetics provides its customers with all the certificates and accompanies any brands through the documentation and product registration process.
